With the increased number of cases in the mental health population as well as greater mental instability within the general public, dealing with the mentally ill has become a common occurrence for first responders. Often lacking is a strong knowledge base and proper tools and techniques for how to handle and interact with these individuals safely and effectively. Proper identification and understanding of the major mental disorders are essential. Additionally, being able to identify the various classes of psychiatric medications and their uses will help the first responder in the identification of the type of mental illness as well as guide his or her interaction.

Missing Persons with Alzheimer's Disease

1 HOUR

The number of people with Alzheimer's continues to increase due to an aging population. 1 in 10 people over age 65 and nearly half over age 85 have Alzheimer's disease. This makes the likelihood that law enforcement will come into contact with an Alzheimer's patient more prominent. This 1 hour course will train you to approach an Alzheimer's patient safely.

Yoga for First Responders

1 HOUR

First responders serving in emergency response can experience physical health issues which range from chronic pain to difficulty sleeping. They are also at risk for post-traumatic stress and are routinely challenged to perform high-stress situations. Yoga practice is effective for reducing the impact of stress experienced by emergency personnel and increasing resiliency to support improved performance in crisis situations. This course explains the scientific basis for yoga practice to support emergency personnel and provides introductory yoga practices appropriate for any first responder. No experience is necessary and flexibility is not a requirement. Although most people associate yoga with poses, this course highlights the most important and beneficial aspect, tactical breathwork. This course will allow you to experience yoga practice and consider what types of yoga may be a good fit for a personal yoga practice. Also included are strategies for incorporating yoga in emergency personnel units.

Cyberstalking

1 HOUR

In recent years, stalkers have taken advantage of the anonymity of the Internet to commit crimes. This has added a new dimension because it is difficult for victims of cyberstalking, as well as law enforcement, to discern the identity of the stalker. Cyberstalking makes the fear more palpable and prosecution more challenging. This course will discuss the basics, relevant laws, challenges, and practical solutions for cyberstalking cases.

Implementing a Body-Worn Camera Program

2 HOURS

A police department that deploys body-worn cameras is making a statement that it believes the actions of its officers are a matter of public record. By facing the challenges and expense of purchasing and implementing a body-worn camera system — and developing policies and training its officers in how to use the cameras — a department creates a reasonable expectation that members of the public and the news media will want to review the actions of officers. And with certain limited exceptions that this course will discuss, body-worn camera video footage should be made available to the public upon request — not only because the videos are public records but also because doing so enables police departments to demonstrate transparency and openness in their interactions with members of the community. This two hour course is intended to serve as a guide to the thoughtful, careful considerations that police departments should undertake if they wish to adopt body-worn cameras.

Videos in this course include:

- Segment one -Overview of FWPD
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Two - Deciding Factors
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Four - Storage
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Three - The Benefits
- Segment Five - Policy and Development
- Segment Six - Some Insights on BWC

Social Media and Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

A robust and comprehensive policy is not in place to extensively cover social media usage for police departments. Some issues departments face regarding social media are legal rights, civil rights, and privacy rights. These issues are still being discussed in the courts. It is beneficial for police officers to successfully monitor social media in order to gain information about threats of criminal activity. This one-hour course will look over the ways social media can be used in law enforcement.

Videos in this course include:

- Law enforcement using social media
- 3 Social Media Tools for Cops
- Social media makes reporting crimes easier
- SNN: Local law enforcement is using social media in a new and helpful way
- As students post school fight videos online, law enforcement uses them to prosecute

Identity Theft Crimes

3 HOURS

The law identifies offenders as anyone who knowingly transfers or uses, without lawful authority, any name or number that may be used, alone or in conjunction with any other information, to identify a specific individual with the intent to commit, or to aid or abet, any unlawful activity that constitutes a violation of Federal law, or that constitutes a felony under any applicable State or local law. A major feature of identity theft is the offender's repeated victimization of a single person. This can include repeatedly using a stolen credit card, taking over a card account, or using stolen personal information to open new accounts. In this three-hour course, we will discuss identity theft and factors that increase the risk of identity theft.

Recognition of Child Abuse or Neglect

2 HOURS

Child abuse and neglect is a serious crime. It can be physical, emotional, or mental abuse. There can also be neglect involved. The role of law enforcement in child abuse cases is to investigate and determine whether a violation of criminal law occurred, identify and apprehend the offender, and file appropriate criminal charges. The response of law enforcement to child abuse needs to be consistent. This two-hour course will look over the problem of child abuse and factors that increase this risk.

Videos in this course include:

- Collaboration between agencies in child abuse
- Child abuse investigations: Handling the Media

What Is Domestic Violence? Defining Domestic Violence

2 HOURS

Domestic disputes are some of the most common calls for police officers. Many domestic disputes do not involve violence; this course discusses those that do, as well as the measures that can be used to reduce them. Domestic violence calls can be challenging for police as they are likely to observe repetitive abuse against the same victims, who may not want to or be able to part from their abusers. These calls are treated as dangerous, partly because old research exaggerated risks to police. This two-hour course begins by describing the problem of domestic violence and reviewing factors that increase its risks. It then identifies a series of questions to help you analyze your local domestic violence problem. Finally, it reviews responses to the problem and what is known about these from evaluative research and police practice.

- This is What Community Oriented Policing Looks Like

Constitutional Law

1 HOUR

This one-hour course will educate you on the Constitution and Constitutional law.

Constitutional and Community Policing

1 HOUR

Community policing operates within the parameters of the Constitution. Various constitutional issues are relevant today. This course will identify the policies and practices that are most frequently called into question from a constitutional perspective while providing effective methods and strategies for successful community policing.

Videos in this course include:

- CNN: Chief Jeffrey Blackwell Talks To Carol Costello About Policing Issues
- Positive Community Policing

Ethics in Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

Each day, police officers face ethical dilemmas and police misconduct can have a huge impact on public trust. This one-hour course serves as a guide to stress the importance of ethics training, ethical leadership, and how each leadership decision in a police department has an impact.

Law Enforcement Intelligence

4 HOURS

In this four-hour Law Enforcement Intelligence course, we will explore why we do what we do, and how we can change what we do for the better of our agency.

Videos in this course include:

- Problem-Oriented Policing: Where Social Work Meets Law Enforcement

Officer Liability

2 HOURS

Law enforcement work is dangerous — plain and simple. Law enforcement officers have constant contact with the public. It is often confrontational and charged with emotion. And in these circumstances, they are responsible for preventing and investigating crimes that might include violations of civil rights. Both the Constitution and federal laws protect individuals against unjustified violation of their civil rights by law enforcement officers. This two-hour course will educate you on the federal laws and Constitutional laws that help officers perform their duties in accordance to these laws.

Videos in this course include:

- Attorney defends actions of fired school officer as 'justified and lawful'
- Dangerous High-Speed Police Chase in California
- Police conduct was 'extreme and outrageous' in chase that ended in crash, lawsuit
- Will Body-Worn Cameras Increase Or Decrease Police Officers Liability?

Public Recording of Police Activities

1 HOUR

Recording the actions and activities of police officers in the performance of their public duties is a form of speech protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, through which individuals may gather and disseminate information of public concern. This right is extended to video and audio recording of any police activity performed in public or where an individual otherwise has a legal right to be present. In effect, the public has the same rights to record police activities as the press. In this course, you will examine civilians' interest in recording police activities as well as the laws and limitations surrounding the public's constitutionally held rights.

Sexual Harassment In The Workplace

1 HOUR

According to the EEOC, sexual harassment charges are the fourth most frequently alleged discrimination issue, and the number of cases continues to steadily climb at a rate of 12 to 13 percent each year. Employees who are educated in recognizing harassment not only contribute to creating a safe and secure workplace for themselves and their co-workers, but prevent dealing with the negative effects that follow. This two-hour course will better inform you about sexual harassment and how to prevent it in order to create a safe and comfortable working environment for both yourself and your co-workers.

State and Federal Law Update (3183 - Texas only)

3 HOURS

This material is a general summary of selected court cases and changes to Texas' criminal law as wrought by the 83rd session of the Texas Legislature. This is not an all-inclusive recitation of every change, nor is it intended as legal advice. Instructors and students must verify all legislative changes and case law holdings discussed herein and are responsible for appropriate implementation of these changes. The following are merely summaries of legislative changes and cases, there is simply no substitute, for both instructors and students, to read the actual statutes, legislative acts, and cases.

State & Legislative Update (3184 - Texas only)

4 HOURS

This course is a summarization of selected court cases and changes to Texas' criminal law as wrought by the 84th session of the Texas Legislature. It is not an all-inclusive recitation of every change, nor is it intended as legal advice. Instructors and students must verify all legislative changes and case law holdings presented herein and are responsible for appropriate implementation of these changes. All questions and implementations should be discussed with your agency's legal advisor and/or local city, county, or district attorney. The Commission on Law Enforcement provides this material as-is and accepts no responsibility for the actions of officers and/or agents who act on the information contained herein.

Use Of Force

2 HOURS

According to the National Institute of Justice, the use of force by law enforcement officers becomes necessary and is permitted under specific circumstances in self-defense or in defense of another individual or group. Police officers receive guidance from their individual agencies, but there is no universal set of rules that governs when officers use force and how much they should use. This two-hour online course provides training and focuses on the legal aspects for an officer to use force when affecting an arrest, investigatory stop, or other seizure of a free citizen.

Opioid Crisis: Protecting Our First Responders

1 HOUR

The increased availability of synthetic opioids coupled with the heroin epidemic has not only led to a significant increase in overdoses and deaths, but also an increased risk to first responders who must come into contact with these substances during the course of their duties. Exposure to small amounts, the size of a grain of sand, can lead to respiratory depression and even death. Proper identification and knowledge of the various opioids, signs and symptoms of exposure, and immediate life-saving measures to be employed in the event of exposure are critical to saving the life of yourself or others. Additionally, the likelihood of first responder exposure requires the implementation of universal precautions including but not limited to personal protective equipment (PPE), Narcan training, and specific procedures for testing of suspected substances.

Overcoming Resistance: Start with Mental Preparation

1 HOUR

People have a desire for a schedule and a routine. However, in law enforcement operations, complacency because of “routine” can lead to serious injury or death. We will present how mental preparation is a key ingredient to changing our perspectives regarding our routines, increasing our safety on the street.

Distracted Driving For Law Enforcement

4 HOURS

In order for a police officer to get to a call safely, he or she must be able to drive without obstructions and distractions. While driving, police officers often need to use radios and Mobile Data Terminals (MDTs) while operating emergency lights and sirens, not to mention the simultaneous use of cell phones. Distracted driving is a growing phenomenon among police officers in the United States and the impairments associated with completing their job duties while driving can be as profound as those associated with driving while drunk. This 4 hour course provides the necessary training to educate law enforcement officers and departments about the dangers and consequences of distracted driving.
